Thursday 5 & Friday 6 June

London School of Economics and Political Science

Pre-event at Dauphine London

Our pre-event this year will be the 19th Dauphine Philosophy Workshop hosted by Dauphine London. The Dauphine Philosophy Workshop (DPW), formerly known as the Dauphine Phenomenology Workshop, is an annual academic event hosted by Université Paris Dauphine–PSL in collaboration with international partners such as the Stockholm School of Economics, NYU or ENS. Organized by the Dauphine Recherches en Management (DRM) research center, the workshop serves as a platform for interdisciplinary dialogue between philosophy and the social sciences, with a particular focus on Management and Organization Studies (MOS). Its first gatherings contributed to the publication of the Oxford Handbook of Phenomenologies and Organization Studies published in 2023.

Since its inception in 2016, the DPW has explored a range of themes that bridge continental philosophy and organizational theory, in particular about the ontologies and ontogenesis of organizing in a digital world. Past editions have delved into topics such as the interplay between animality, technology, and humanity; the experience of commons and communalism in our digital societies; and the phenomenologies of (co-)presence in digitally mediated environments. Notably, the 7th edition in 2023 examined 'Anti-Phenomenologies,' investigating critiques of traditional phenomenology and their implications for contemporary philosophical and organizational thought.

Under the guidance of scholars like François-Xavier de Vaujany, Kätlin Pulk, Géraldine Paring and Marc Lenglet, the DPW continues to foster innovative discussions that challenge conventional boundaries between disciplines, contributing to the evolution of thought in both philosophy and management studies.

The topic of the DPW 2025 will be "The Negative Ontologies of Time: Within or Beyond the Happening of Organizing?"
